Why Stoneware? The Best Material for Casseroles

When choosing a casserole dish, it's important to consider the material. Stoneware, like that used in the Le Regalo casserole, offers several benefits that make it superior to other options like metal or glass. First, stoneware distributes heat evenly, ensuring that your dishes are cooked thoroughly and consistently. This is especially important for casseroles and baked goods, where even cooking is crucial for the best results.

Stoneware also retains heat better than other materials, keeping your food warm long after it's been removed from the oven. Additionally, its non-reactive surface makes it ideal for cooking acidic foods like tomatoes, which can sometimes react with metal cookware and alter the taste of your dish.
